WE MUST HAVE THEM.

HOVEMENT FOR A COMPLETE CON-FEDERATE ROSTER APPROVED.

Flews of Rev. Dr. Ray, Major Thomas A. Brander, and Mr. Carlton McCarthy on the Subject.

The movement to secure a complete roster of the Virginia troops in the Confederate armies is being agitated and sended by the veteans all over the city. Everywhere the Dispatch representatives went yesterday they were urged to keep hammering at it. This the Dispatch proposes to do. In the mean time, let all persons who have rolls of commands of Virginia troops that were in the Confederate service send them to the Adjutant-General's office. The more material General Anderson accumulates before the Legislature meets the better prepared he will be to place the matter before that body in such form as will give weight to the recommendation for necessary appropriation to carry through the work. Mr. Alexander Jehnings said yester-day that in his chat with the Dispatch representative on Saturday he forgot that there was in the possession of an officer of the old Pickett Division Association a book containing the names of nearly all the members of the division.

DR. RAY'S VIEWS. Rev. Dr. Ray said: "I desire to con-gratulate you on the effort you are making in your valuable spaper looking towards the securement of a perfect roster of the Virginia soldiers engaged in the Confederate service in the late civil war. Although nearly thirty years have passed since the unpleasantness ended at Appomattox, and many who fought for the rights and liberties of Virginia and the southland are dead; yet enough of them still live, some in every company and battalion furnished by Virginia, to give help in the matter. And, with the aid of the veteran camps of the State, and information to be obtained from the archives at Washington, it is possible that a fairly accurate list of the living and dead Virginians engaged in the Confederate service during the four years of war could be mide. I have no doubt that the next State Legislature will readily make a sufficient appropriation to of the Virginia soldlers engaged in doubt that the description of the following that the description of further this object, which is and ought to be dear to every Virginian, for every Virginia family was represented in the Confederate service. If the cause is lost, and we grant that secession and slavery among the items then submitted to the among the items then submitted to the arbitrament of arms were surrendered, yet, when the impartial story is told in truth's near or far-off light, the descendants of the brave and true who made such struggles against such odds will rejoice that they descended from men who had the courage of their convictions. I wish you great success in this worthy effort."

DUTY OF EVERY SURVIVOR. I have been reading with much plea-re," said Major Thomas A. Brander, "the interest the Dispatch has taken in trying to secure for Virginia a roster of the commands and officers and men which the commands and officers and men which she furnished the Confederate army.

"I feel that it is the duty of every survivor of the Army of Northern Virginia to do everything in his power to see that this record is made, and with the assistance of the forty camps in the different sections of the State (which form the Grand Camp), and the records on file at the War-Records Office at Washington, we should be able to get a very satisfactory, if not a complete, roster of our Virginia troops.

Each camp should appoint a commit-Each camp should appoint a commit-tee to enroil the names of all of their members and soldiers in the section that their camp is located, and forward the same to the Adjutant-General's office."

NOT NECESSARY TO ARGUE. "I would not suppose it necessary to gue such a proposition," remarked Mr. argue such a proposition, remarker the Carlton McCarthy. "I was under the Impression that the State of Virginia had already provided for the systematic enrolment of all the troops furnished by Carlesbergte army, If rolment of all the troops furnished by this State to the Confederate army. BASIS OF THE CONTENTION. The contention as to the unconstitution-ality of the clause exempting from "any ality of the clause exempting from "any additional tax" is based upon sections 1 and 4 of article 10 of the Constitution. Article 1 provides that taxation "shall be equal and uniform, and all property, both real and personal, shall be taxed in proportion to its value." Section 4 declares that "the capital invested in all taxed as other property."

The enforcement of the Attorney-General's construction would mean a decided increase in the revenues of the Commonwealth.

When the officers of some of the leading building and loan associations were informed of the Attorney-General's opin-ion and asked what they proposed to do ion and asked what they proposed to do they all replied to the same effect—that they proposed to pay their taxes under the act is it was passed by the Legisla-ture. The question whether they could be made to pay more was one for the courts to decide

Hampden-Sidney and Its People.
HAMPDEN-SIDNEY, July 19, 1894.
To the Editor of the Dispatch:
The people of Richmond have lately been favored with a good deal of rather irreconcilable information about our community. Both the informants are doctors of divinity and instructors of youth. The present writer is neither a doctor of divinity nor an educator, and perhaps he shows unwarrantable impertinence in venturing to say anything. However, there is no intention of trespassing on venturing to say anything. However, there is no intention of trespassing on the reverend gentlemen's preserves. I will only mention things below their notice, trusting that you may have some faint desire to know something more about a village threatened with the desertion of some sixty or so ministerials who have been in the habit of spending eight months out of the twelve among who have been in the habit of spending eight months out of the twelve among us, but who now long for city life. These gentlemen are away now-preach-ing and being made much of in other rural districts. It is needless to say that rural districts. It is needless to say that we miss them—but astonishing that we are managing to exist without them and even find some enjoyment without their presence. For instance; the gentlemen of the summer school of Hampden-Sidney College and those of the community gave a hay-ride on the evening of Tuesday, the 10th instant—what more appropriate to hayseeds?—and followed it up with a german at the Farmville Lithia Springs. Again: The young men above mentioned man at the Farmville Lithia Springs. Again: The young men above mentioned gave a select lawn party on the 18th. The grounds of the Union Theological Seminary were used for this entertainment, and the scene, lighted up by the moon ard Chinese lanterns would have been gay but for the haunting visions of missing ministerials.

As soon as our ministerial friends get set up in Richmond, we propose to open a school for young ladies in the deserted halls and the Prince Alberts afore mentioned shall know the place no more, How they disport themselves in their new quarters we hope to hear from you.

A Boy and a Dog Fight in the Water.
A desperate encounter occurred in the East river, at Fiftieth street, on Saturday morning between a small boy and a large St. Bernard dog. The boy variquished the dog, but he bears marks that will disfigure him for life, says the New York correspondent of the Baltimore Sun. The dog bit him severely about the face and head. The wounded lad is Emanuel Farric, 16 years old, whose family live at No. 217 east Forty-sixth street. It has been young Farrie's custom to go swimming every morning during vacation time. He chose the foot of Fiftieth street as his favorite bathing spot. He went there about 7 o'clock yesterday morning, accompanied by George Hogan, another lad of his own age, who lives at No. 168 east Forty-fifth street. The boys had been swimming only a few minutes when Charles Harinschfeger, who keeps a packing-house at No. 162 Second avenue, came down to the dock. He was accompanied by his powerful St. Bernard.

The animal watched the boys bathing for a short time, and then, with a loud bark, sprang over the jagged rocks beside the dock and plunged into the water. It seemed to be his desire to chase the boys ashore. He made first toward young Hogan. The boy was close to tite shore, and he scrambled from the water when he saw the dog swimming toward him. The animal then turned about and swam toward young Farrie, who was about twenty feet from the shore. The lad did not take any notice of the animal until he felt the St. Bernard attacked him again. The animal sank his teeth in the boy's face, causing the blood to flow freely. The lad screamed for help, but no one went to his assistance. The owner of the dog is said to have looked calmly on. The St. Bernard attacked the small swimmer arsin and armin, sinking. A Boy and a Dog Fight in the Water.

Some little activity has also been infosed into the Republicans hereabouts during the last few days, and they are known to be casting around for a candidate.
